Dear Brother:==

I have to-day examined the accounts on mother's books pertaining to me, and have found some things which I desire to look into with you. At first the accounts were kept by Sister Peck, and she was not, of course, acquainted with the standing of some of them, which I will call to your attention.

FIRST, written in under date of Oct. 31, 1897, is a payment to Gage Printing Co., for $286.20. This bill was made years before by the corporation formed before you and mother went to Australia. We brought out some juvenile books while the corporation was doing business, and for this corporation. It was a bill against this corporation and not against me. We had a good sale of them during the year the corporation was in operation.

SECOND, Under date of Feb. 4, 1898, I am charged with $300.00 paid to J.H.Kellogg, by Review & Herald. I cannot call to mind how ~~an~~ a condition could exist which would bring this as an indebtedness against me.

THIRD, In 1901 I am charged with $225.00 by Good Health Publishing Company. I cannot now understand how such a charge could come.

FOURTH, In Sept, 1903, I am charged with note to H.W.Kellogg, for $1000.00. I suppose this is one of the notes given by mother to H.W.K. in payment of his claim on Parsons' Hand-Book. If this is the case it came in the deal with the corporation formed for handling this and our other outside books, formed before you and mother went to Australia. When this corporation was closed up on me the book here referred to was published for mother's benefit, and two or three editions sold by Mr. Smith, of Ohio. If this is true there are five payments of interest of $50.00 each which followed, amounting to $250.00 which would come under the same head.

I present these items for your consideration.

Your brother,

J. E. White.
